Dr Rachel Woolrich

Clinical Psychologist
Oxford MND Care and Research Centre

I have been working as a clinical psychologist with the Oxford MND Care & Research Centre since November 2021.

I also work with patients with another neurological condition called NF2-related Schwannomatosis (a condition where people develop nerve tumours).

I trained in Oxford 20 years ago and have since worked across adult mental health, eating disorders, spinal injury and clinical health psychology more broadly.

In recent years I've developed a passion for working with people with life-limiting health conditions. I believe specialist psychological expertise is an essential ingredient for multidisciplinary healthcare teams caring for patients with MND and their families.
